EVIDENCE & PERSPECTIVES SERIES:

“The Best We Can Be”

Leading Non-Profits to Successfully Navigate Difficult Times

March 10, 2009

Non-profit Boards face unprecedented challenges in these highly uncertain times: reductions in funding, increased demand for services, greater reporting requirements, and public demand for accountability and transparency. Board members are legally responsible for providing oversight for the non-profit organizations they serve, but are constrained by their limited time as volunteers and by the funding constraints that all non-profits face. What should Board members expect of themselves and their organizations in these stormy economic times? How do Boards make tough choices, and how do they get the evidence they need to steer the organization successfully through the next few years?

This program will address how non-profit Boards can help to position their organizations to have the best chance to grow and flourish in these difficult economic times, and to push their organizations to be “the best they can be.”
